Claude Cheat Keys for UN Reporting & Briefing

REDD+ annex desks: 5 verified differences.

Check the annex before it leaves the ministry. Sent shortly before review week, it leaves LULUCF experts limited time to prepare.

Every flag points to a place in your annex or to a quoted line from the UNFCCC report

[p 24]

[p 23]

[p 24] In some cases, technical annexes were submitted shortly before the corresponding review weeks, leaving limited time for the secretariat and LULUCF experts to prepare for the technical analysis.

[p 23] The number of technical annexes submitted is likely to increase in the second cycle of BTRs

One prompt for your annex. No invented deadlines.

Project instructions

copy and paste

Check my draft REDD+ technical annex before we send it with our Biennial Transparency Report. Use only my annex, the BTR text I give you and the UNFCCC document at https://documents.un.org/api/symbol/access?s=FCCC/PA/CMA/2026/10&l=en&t=pdf. List every placeholder, every cross-reference that points to something missing, every passage that sends the reader to an unnamed document and every value that differs from my BTR text. Quote my text for each problem and say where it is. Sort the list into blockers, fixes and notes. If my send plan puts the annex close to review week, quote the UN document's line about annexes that arrived shortly before review weeks, with its page. If you cannot open the UN document, say so and do not quote it from memory. Do not invent deadlines or required sections.
